

Mechatronic intelligent unit for tightness checking (negative pressure/vacuum) Reverse Module TL8 - machined

Mihai Hacman, Andrei Florin, Badea Sorin Ionut, Alexandru Buga

<https://doi.org/10.1109/ICMECH.2011.5971248>

Abstract

The testing intelligent unit is a mono-block construction and verifies the air loss from the pieces who composed the Reverse module (Power transfer unit).

Keywords: mechatronic intelligent unit, modules, power transfer units, tightness checking machines, tightness checking, automotive industry

References

1. S. Ponomarev, V. Biderman and K. Liharev, "Calculul modern de rezistență în constructia de mașini", (Modern strength calculation in car manufacturing).
Google Scholar
2. Gheorghe and I. G., Mechatronics, Romania:CEFIN Publishing House, 2002, ISBN 973-99591-0-5.
Google Scholar
3. Gheorghe and I. G., Sensors and transducers for industrial applications, Romania:CEFIN Publishing House, 2003, ISBN 973-99591-0-5.
Google Scholar
4. Gheorghe and I. G., Integrated mechatronics, Romania:CEFIN Publishing House, 2004, ISBN 973-99591-0-5 | 973-99591-8-0.
Google Scholar
5. Gheorghe and I. G., Integrating Engineering, Romania:CEFIN Publishing House, 2007, ISBN 978-973-87042-7-5.
Google Scholar
6. Gheorghe and I. G., Engineer's Handbook of precision mechanics mechatronics and integronics, Romania:CEFIN Publishing House, 2006, ISBN 978-973-87042-6-8.
Google Scholar
7. Gheorghe and I. G., "Intelligent measurement technique" in , Romania:CEFIN Publishing House, 2004, ISBN 973-87042-1-9.
Google Scholar
8. Gheorghe, I. G., Palade, D. D., Pau, V., et al., Microsensorics micromechatronics and microrobotics, Romania:CEFIN Publishing House, 2004, ISBN 973-87042-0-0.
Google Scholar