FOREWORD

This book is dedicated to the third constituent of the English language, namely to the grammatical system. The grammatical description of English is effected by the science of grammar. We always do something better when we know how to do it. Grammar shows us how to use the language correctly. It is a necessary tool, which must be used wisely. Grammar is the art of using the right words in the right places.

This work was written in the hope that it will give practical help to all that are interested in the English language as well as to practical lessons. Review exercises are provided, these exercises concentrate on a number of concepts taught in the corresponding chapter.

The material of the book has been used for many years in teaching students of the Faculties of Computing and Food Technologies., and has thus been used put to test of practical work.
